The main results of this thesis are a number of precise formulation of this process, and a few algorithms that carry it out. Our rigorous definitions allow us to identify of a novel concept of structure: the alphabet. We propose that a learning mechanism is one which constructs such structures as representations of the given data. The alphabet allows to draw interesting links between theories in pattern recognition and pattern classification. The structural descriptions constructed by the algorithms are based on the two concepts of code and classification used, as data compression tools. We provide means for evaluating the efficiency of the encodings created using ideas from information theory. We reduce learning to an optimization problem and we suggest that the mechanisms proposed work at any descriptive level. Our approach was inspired by the goal of interpreting...
